London Screening for 'Recognize Myself'

Happy Endings in a BuSh-o

Hello.

We don't have quite so much news for you this time around, just a couple of screenings (one of which is in London - nudge nudge...) and a quick update as to what we're up to.

London screening for 'Recognize Myself'.

No Excuses! If you haven't seen Recognize Myself yet (and let's face it, you probably haven't), this is the best chance you'll have. It's going to be showing at the V Creative Short Film Festival, which is literally just down the street from us on Holloway Road! You probably don't know where the Media Centre is - that's because most of the time it's a scout hut. The address is 319-321 Holloway Road, which is just north of the tube. The date? The 23rd (Yes, this Saturday). And no, it won't eat up your evening, since the festival runs from 2.30 to sometime past 6. The film should be somewhere between 3.30 and 6 - we'll email you nearer to Saturday if we can to give you an exact time. Let us know if you plan on coming, or email them directly at vcreative@hotmail.co.uk so they've got some idea of numbers for drinks and seating etc. It's organised by a youth project encompassing film, event management and volunteering, which we think is great. Come down and encourage them - remember, no excuses! If you have already seen the film, this is a better quality version (slightly re-cut and improved picture quality) so well worth seeing again.

Visit the site for the project here if you like.

Happy Endings in a BuSh-o.

We're probably going to Hungary in early August. This means we'll be going hungry as well, looking at the price of the flights. It's a bad joke, but it's true. It's going to be (probably) our biggest festival yet, so just to make sure everyone takes it seriously, it's called BuSho. Apparently, this stands for Budapest Short International Film Festival. It looks very nice and hopefully will be quite similar to KAN in Poland. We're screening on the evening of the 3rd, if you happen to be in the area, just before the opening ceremony. We're moderately excited.

For more information, go to the website, which is here.

In other news

We still haven't finished the website. It looks fine in Internet Explorer and Safari, but awful in Firefox. As soon as we can get it to look even half-decent in Firefox, we'll have it up for you people to look at at work or other times when you're bored. For now, our myspace is best for those purposes. Also, we've changed the newsletter design slightly - let us know, is the new design better or worse than the old one?

That's all for now - see you on Saturday!
