Premiere of Suburban Madness
Sleeping and Dreaming in Uppsala

Hello.

I can't believe it's been ten months since I last wrote a newsletter!

2009 has been a really exciting year so far. Happy Endings made it to Cannes Film Festivals for the first time (read about it here, in swedish), which was a wonderful experience. We've also produced a short fictional film called The Theory which is ready to hit post-production. Brilliant editors, please step forward.

Premiere of Suburban Madness

This year we've also been busy with the documentary we shot in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, in February this year. The documentary, Suburban Madness, is now ready and we're holding a free premiere screening at the - appropriately named - Rio Cinema on Saturday, September 26, at 1.30pm.

Just come along if you can!

For further details about the project and screening please have a look at the press kit and the project's blog.

Sleeping and Dreaming in Uppsala

Our short animated film, Sleeping and Dreaming of Food, which is based on the comic by the swedish/icelandic comic book writer and artist Kolbeinn Karlsson, has been selected for the regional program at the prestigious Uppsala Short Film Festival!

The film will, together with only five other short films with local connections, make up the HERE AND NOW program at the 28th Uppsala International Short Film Festival in October.

Kolbeinn Karlsson and I first met in Uppsala in 1998 and he is currently based there, so Uppsala Short Film Festival was an aim all along the making of this short.

Sleeping and Dreaming of Food was also selected for the iFestival competition at the 20th Stockholm Film Festival in November. But sadly, Stockholm needs the film to be - at least - a Swedish premiere, so we had to turn down their offer.
